Supporting Information for:

Smartphone Fluorescence Spectroscopy

Hojeong Yu,¹ Yafang Tan,¹ and Brian T. Cunningham^{*1,2}

¹Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering, Micro and Nanotechnology Laboratory, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 208 North Wright Street, Urbana, Illinois 61801, United States

²Department of Bioengineering, Micro and Nanotechnology Laboratory, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 208 North Wright Street, Urbana, Illinois 61801, United States

Figure S1. The mechanical dimensions of the optical cradle. The cradle is primarily divided into two distinct parts: the smartphone-holding section and the optical components section. Widths (w_1 and w_2) and lengths (l_1 , l_2 , l_3 , and l_4) are specified in the drawing.