Heir Property Act becomes law in Arkansas!

Legislature gives unanimous, bipartisan support. February marked the culmination of our work to get the Uniform Partition of Heirs Property Act passed in Arkansas. House Bill 1245 was filed on February 3 and became law, Act 107, on February 18. With primary sponsors Rep. Matthew J. Shepherd of El Dorado and Sen. Jeremy Hutchinson of Benton, the bill made smooth progress through the legislature with 129 legislators voting YEA. There were no votes against. Co-sponsors were Rep. Warwick Sabin, Sen. David Burnett, Sen. Joyce Elliott, Sen. Stephanie Flowers, and Sen. David Johnson. We are grateful to our elected officials for supporting this important and balanced legislation.

When Act 107 takes effect on January 1, 2016, Arkansas will join Alabama, Georgia, Montana, and Nevada as states that have the Heir Property Act. We wish every success to Hawaii, South Carolina, and Washington, DC, as their legislators consider the Act and we hope the remaining states will also soon pass this legislation.

Family land can help build communities.

Family assets. Community wealth. The Heir Property Act will help make family land an asset for Arkansas families by facilitating responsible property management. This is possible because the Heir Property Act carefully balances the interests of owners who want to retain their family land with the interests of owners who want to sell their share.

But it also promotes community wealth and development. How? When families maintain and develop their property and productively manage their land, the county not only spends less money clearing dilapidated structures and weed lots but also gets more tax revenue. Well maintained land means more money for county services and more money for community development. And that benefits everyone.

So we are very pleased that our elected officials supported this balanced legislation. It means good things for Arkansas families, Arkansas communities, and Arkansas's future.
