

Pragmatic Computational Mysticism

Joseph Willrich Lutalo Cwa Mukama Rwemera Weira*
jwl@nuchwezi.com

October 10, 2024

Abstract

Programming languages[1] create a medium via which one can define and execute orders with certain effects at will, and certainly so.

Keywords: Foundations, Philosophy, Computing

Language & Thought

First, note how the Webster’s college dictionary, an authoritative lexicon concerning the modern English language defines the term “language” [2]:

Definition 1 (Language). *1 a) the expression or communication of thoughts and feelings
... c) the vocal sounds so used, or the written symbols for them*

Basically, we see how it is indeed language, or rather, its use via communication — a willful application of language, that makes possible the creation and transmission of [any] thought.

Command & Control

Both experience and natural sense shall quickly reveal that, above all things, the most fundamental power language, or rather, the exercise of language, confers upon whomsoever can understand, wield and apply it, is nothing less of a conscious, supernatural power over things — natural or not. An illustration of the power and command man can wield with proper use of language and thought expression can be seen in the scriptures—see Exodus 10:21-23 [3]; several things going on here. Such a useful reminder to not take things like body-language, languages for the blind or deaf any lighter either.

Transformation over Time

This is what is meant, or rather implied by Joseph, when he speaks of the willful, masterly application of language as “Magic”, in the following quote from his very obscure novel[4]; “Magic, Can bring man all these and more—It can bring the universe to man, Whether seen or unseen”.

References

- [1] Joseph Willrich Lutalo. Programming language engineeringa review of text processing language design, implementation and evaluation methods. Preprints, October 2024.
- [2] language. In Webster’s New World dictionary of the American language, page 792, 1986.
- [3] The ninth plague: the darkness. In THE NEW JERUSALEM BIBLE, page 92, 2013.
- [4] Joseph Willrich Lutalo. Section 5: The aftermath: The new chwezi. In Shrines of the Free Men, page 305, 2018.

*Founder, CTO, CS & IP at Nuchwezi, Graduate Researcher (Final Year) at Makerere University, College of Computing and Information Science